

AMENDMENTS TO THE SPECIFICATION

The applicant has been given the option to correct her drawings sheets or the specification to resolve an issue of a reference character being shown on a drawing sheet but not identified in the specification. The applicant has selected to correct the problem by making a change to her specification. The specification has also been amended to correct the spelling of "Binky" as it relates to this application, which was different in the specification and drawings. Throughout this application, "Binky" is now standardized in spelling with the ending of a "y" instead of an "ie". One instance of surplus language, an omitted number, and three sentences relating to the two-part fasteners shown in the drawings are also a part of the amendments made to the specification.